POSTDOCTORAL POSITION IN
The Program for Pregnancy and Postpartum Health

We are looking for a postdoctoral fellow with experience conducting systematic reviews/meta-analyses to carry out a project funded by Occupational Health and Safety at the Government of Alberta. This position will be based in the Program for Pregnancy and Postpartum Health at the University of Alberta (exerciseandpregnancy.ca).

The successful candidate will be involved in conducting a systematic review and meta-analysis with the support of the Alberta SPOR Support Unit. This will include (but will not be limited to) co-ordination of the project, data extraction, data analysis, presenting findings to stakeholders including at local and international scientific meetings, and preparing manuscripts that emerge from this research. Additional opportunities may be available.

Candidates should have the following attributes:

1) strong communication skills (written and spoken English);
2) an excellent academic record;
3) a keen desire to learn;
4) strong organizational skills; and
5) ability to work well as a team.

Prior experience with systematic reviews/meta-analyses, occupational activity, pregnancy and/or exercise would be major assets. However, additional training will be provided, as needed.

This full-time position, contingent on satisfactory performance, is available for a period of 1 year, with the possibility of renewal (subject to securing funding). Annual salary is commensurate with CIHR standards. Benefits information for this position can be found at the following link: ttp://www.postdoc.ualberta.ca/healthcoverage.aspx.

To Apply:
Interested candidates can submit their application consisting of a cover letter, curriculum vitae, and contact information for three references to:
